

My Heros

Henry

Henry Ford didn't do anything particularly "heroic" but he made on of the most brilliant things:

He Invented the thing which changed the world, and gave the opportunity to people like me to have a true passion.

Henry Ford was a genius, and in many ways the father of modern industry, He created a new way of working, his way ,of organized work which was called the assembly line and was very innovative.

Henry Ford, before becoming an industrialist, was a guy like us, an apprentice mechanic who later became engineer, and who knows, the same might happen to one of us?!!!!!!

After many experiments, he built his first car, and after having sold some he founded the car FORD, the first economic car ,model T.

His idea was to build a car simple and inexpensive so that everyone might have it.

Henry Ford was born in 1863 and died 'in 1947, and for me he was really one of the men who gave a real contribution to the change of life of all persons. Without him perhaps people like me would not have a true passion.

He said

"I do not consider machines that bear my name simply machines For me they are the concrete realization of a theory that aims at making this world a better place for mankind. "
